

Main Office Building
The main building of the Cheong Wa Dae serves as both the President's Office and a reception hall for foreign diplomats. It was built in 1991 based on the traditional architectural style of Joseon's royal palaces.

Official Residence
The official residence of the First Family consists of a main building which serves as a living space, a detached reception hall for receiving guests, a traditional-style garden, and a detached sarangchae.

Sangchunjae
This building is presented as an example of traditional Korean architecture to state guests from domestic and overseas, and it used to hold protocol events and unofficial meetings.

Chunchugwan
This center serves as the venue for the President's press conferences and as a press room for accredited news reporters. The name "Chunchugwan" originates from the old government office known as the Chunchugwan or Yemun Chunchugwan, which was in charge of recording historic events for posterity.

Ounjeong Pavilion
Ounjeong Pavilion was named after Oungak Pavilion in the Secret Garden of Gyeongbokgung Palace. Its name literally means "a pavilion (jeong) with a view of five-colored (o) clouds (un) where the heavenly god plays".

State Guest House
This house is used to host official events, such as performances and banquets for heads of state, presidents or prime ministers of other countries, and large official gatherings of with more than 100 people.

Chilgung Shrine
The Chilgung Shrine, designated as Historic Site in 1966, contains the ancestral tablets of royal concubines who gave birth to kings of the Joseon Dynasty. It enshrines seven tablets including those of Royal Noble Consort Suk of the Haeju Choe clan, the mother of King Yeongjo, and Imperial Noble Consort Sunheon of the Yeongwol Eom clan, the mother of Crown Prince Uimin.

Nokjiwon
Regarded as the most beautiful garden at the Cheong Wa Dae, Nokjiwon is populated by some 120 species of trees, as well as commemorative trees planted by former Presidents. A Children's Day event is held in this garden.

Chimnyugak Pavilion
Built in the early 1900s, this traditional style of pavilion has been designated as Seoul City's Tangible Cultural Heritage . The pavilion is located in the precincts of Cheong Wa Dae, at the former site of the Secret Garden of Gyeongbokgung Palace. It is believed to have been an annex of the North Palace.

The Stone Buddha Seated on a Square Pedestal in Gyeongju
Designated as a Treasure in 2018, this stone statue of a seated Buddha was created in the ninth century during the Unified Silla period. It is a valuable cultural heritage and an outstanding example of the refined Buddhist sculpture of Unified Silla, which inherited the style of the principal Buddha statue at Seokguram Grotto.
